My thanks to Prof Richard Hoyle for discovering the account book, amongst many boxes of family items, and bringing it to my attention. Also to Helen Wallbank of Slaidburn Heritage Centre and to Chris Spencer for their help with information on the Wilkinson family.

INTRODUCTION

WILLIAM CARR

The account book of William Carr Senior, mercer of Settle, was discovered amongst papers belonging to the Wilkinson family of Aysgarth. This fascinating book gives a glimpse of the everyday life of a shopkeeper and his customers in a rural Yorkshire town at the beginning of the eighteenth century. Such books rarely come to light and we are indebted to the family who donated this treasure to the archive at Northallerton.

William was part of the vast Carr family who originated in Northumberland. A branch of this family settled in the Parish of Giggleswick in the late medieval period and were based at Stackhouse. Quite where William fits into the family tree is difficult to ascertain as the Carrs were a large family with branches in Stackhouse, Settle, Langcliffe and Giggleswick; and many of them were named William! However we know that William senior became linked to the Wilkinson family in November 1714 when he married Jane Wilkinson of Swinshea at Giggleswick Church.

During his lifetime he became a wealthy man with a house, shops, barns, stables and gardens in Settle market square where the Naked Man still stands. In his will dated 1731 he bequeathed this group of properties to his nephew Henry Towne; in his own words, ‘which I purchased of John Cookson and his mother’; unfortunately no record of this purchase has yet come to light. William owned other properties and lands in the Settle area and also at Langrigg in Bishopdale which he rented out to David Harkar in 1728 for a period of three years. When he died in 1732 his Inventory totalled £1001.15s. 5d. making him one of the wealthiest men in the parish at the beginning of that century. This total does not include the value of his properties and lands, which were not taken into account at this time. A closer examination of his inventory dated January 1731/2 appears to show him running an inn at some point as well as his drapery shop, as evidenced by the following items: 31 chairs, 6 tables, 25 pewter dishes, 21 plates, a substantial amount of bedding, a mash tub, 2 coolers, 4 barrells, and more tellingly, 5 spitts used for roasting large joints of meat on. A further search of the account book reveals William paying Robert Brayshaw for making malt for him over a period of three years. If we examine the inventory of John Cookeson (1690) from whom William bought the property, we see that John also appears to have been running the Naked Man as an inn, with many beds, bedding, crockery, cutlery, cooking equipment and numerous barrells included by the assessors.

On his death William’s account book was taken over by his brother-in-law Leonard Wilkinson of Swinshea, Dale Head, Slaidburn, who proceeded to use it for his farming accounts. Leonard used any spare pages or even half pages for this and even went to the extreme of cutting out some blank pages, probably for his own letter writing.

The Account Book

The Carr accounts are chiefly written in a clear hand with only the occasional smudge or tear to cause problems for the transcriber. The book starts with an index of all his clients followed by eighty sets of accounts brought forward from an old debt book. The earliest of these is for 1711 and twenty-four sets of the accounts have been crossed through as having been subsequently paid. Sandwiched between the index and these accounts, and in another hand, is a fascinating recipe for an infusion containing Rue, Sage, Mint, Rosemary, Wormwood and Lavender, all mixed with white wine vinegar. This concoction is to be used to ‘wash your mouth and rub your loins and temples every day’ and also to be carried about on a bit of sponge to help ward off any infections and is described as an Antipestilential Preservative; it is dated 4th January 1721.

Eventually we reach page one of the mercer’s accounts, commencing in September 1721 with an order from Mr William Carr of Stackhouse for fabric. William senior supplied over forty different types of cloth during his time as a mercer including carsey, tammy, fustian, serge, canvas and silks in various colours but also spotted, uswell and belladine. Allied to these fabrics were items of haberdashery including tape, thread, hooks, eyes, ribbon, braids, needles, lace and of course buttons, the latter being of great variety. Frequently described as brests and coats, these buttons came in many forms namely, brass, horn, ockamy, mettle, gimp, pearl and pewter.

Although cloth remained the basis of his trade he also sold hats, handkerchiefs, gloves and clogs, tobacco, tallow and soap; there are also references to him selling straw, beans, barley and oats. Occasionally paper, quills and educational Latin text books such as Corderi and Hools Accidence are found amongst the accounts. Presumably the close proximity to Giggleswick School helped make these a viable proposition or maybe they were bought in by special request for his clients.

Frequently bills were settled with goods ‘in kind’ and the range was extensive, from whole cheeses to geese, butter, livestock, cartfulls of manure and turf and also by ‘work done’ as on one occasion when William’s hair was cut by the local barber in part payment of his bill. There is often a long time gap between the account being drawn up and the subsequent payment of the bill; in some instances several years elapse before the account was settled. Another side-line was money lending although he was not engaged in this to the same degree as his brother-in-law Leonard as will be seen later.

William's clients came from all the five townships comprising the Ancient Parish of Giggleswick namely, Settle, Rathmell, Giggleswick, Langcliffe and Stainforth, and also from villages, hamlets and farmsteads in many of the surrounding dales. The customer base extended from Ingleton and Bentham in the north-west to Gargrave and Skipton in the south-east, from Colne in the south to Kettlewell and Buckden in the north. He also traded in sack webbs, pieces of coarse cloth which came straight from the loom and which were delivered by carriers, one of whom was John Wright of Settle. The destinations of most of these carriers are not given, however we do have evidence for four of them. One travelled to Halifax, another to Stockport, whilst the third travelled to Otley. However the furthest journey was to Manchester and was accomplished in two stages. In August 1722 the carrier Richard Nutter of Pendleton took three-quarters of a sack webb to Blackburn to a Manchester carrier Sharrock, who we can only assume took them southwards to Manchester.

The accounts for the shop came to an end in February 1725, the final one being for Mary Moon who purchased 9<sup>d</sup> worth of black serge and ½<sup>d</sup> worth of silk at a cost of 9½<sup>d</sup>. After this William appears to have retired to his farm, as subsequent accounts chiefly relate to the buying and selling of stock and the costs of summering his cattle and sheep. These came to an end on page 106 and the remaining sixty-four pages are all Leonard's farming accounts, apart from a final reference of William's to the summering of two stirks on the penultimate page and dated 1731.

An examination of the clients occupations, where given, show twenty-seven different trades, 65 % of whom were trading in Settle itself. These include Inn-keepers (8) Tailors (5) Mercers (4) Masons (3) Shoemakers (3) Butchers (3) Apothecaries (2) Sadlers (2) Weavers (2) and Servants (2) plus a dozen other trades varying from a Milliner to a Tanner. This is just one aspect worthy of detailed analysis and the whole book provides us with an invaluable resource when trying to picture life in the Settle area in the early eighteenth century.

LEONARD WILKINSON

Leonard took over William's Account Book in January 1731, itemising his own expenses in whatever space was available, even on occasion scribbling on a couple of spare lines in the middle of a page. However the entries from page 106 onwards are solely Wilkinson family expenses apart from one short item of William's on the penultimate page. Leonard died in 1771 and the accounts were carried on by his successor until November 1790. At times the farming accounts are almost illegible and the spelling is unusual to say the least. Despite these shortcomings the information within provides a fascinating insight into the life of a wealthy yeoman farmer and his family in the mid to late eighteenth century.

The only son of John Wilkinson of Aysgarth, Leonard had a sister Jane, who married William Carr Senior of Settle in November 1714, the instigator of this account book. Leonard himself married Ann Caley in 1734 at Slaidburn and through this marriage inherited a large farm in Dale Head known as Swinshea, sadly now just a pile of stones beside the road. During his lifetime he increased his estate substantially, purchasing farms and closes nearby. The rents chargeable on these farmsteads are mentioned regularly in the accounts and on occasion details are given of the terms of the agreement. An example of this is the terms which Stephen Lawson agreed to for renting Kettlesbeck, west of Eldroth in the parish of Lawkland. This included ploughing the land 'once over in four years' and also spreading lime on 'some part of the ploughing ground every year'. In his own right Leonard owned three farms and various closes in Newbiggin, Thoraby and Bishopdale in the parish of Aysgarth plus other closes in Settle, all of which brought in additional rental income.

The accounts vary considerably from day to day household expenditure including food and clothing to his farming expenses such as the purchase of lime and dung to spread on the land and to the paying of the local smith to shoe his horses, namely Robin and Rocky. Amongst the foodstuffs mentioned are tea, sugar, cheese, veal, lamb, treacle, tobacco, butter, wine, brandy, rum and on one occasion 8<sup>d</sup> worth of cockles and mussels. Fabrics were purchased for the tailor to make up clothing for the family and include silks and mohair, but by far the most frequent expense was the repair of shoes, boots and clogs and whole pages are devoted to these items.

Farming entries include the buying and selling of stock, the summering of them on pastures both local and further afield and the costs incurred when his cows were put to the bull; these details extend to a whole page. Wages were a constant expenditure and included those paid for work done on the land e.g. ploughing, the sowing of crops including potatoes, haymaking and the shearing of his sheep. Another major cost was the maintenance of his properties including wages paid out for thatching, plastering and the slating of roofs.

Finally, the Wilkinsons were money lenders on a substantial scale but without detailed analysis of the accounts and further research, it is difficult to say which member of the family was involved. The majority of the details concerning the borrowing and lending of money are in a different hand to Leonard's although some are definitely his. On several occasions a large sum of money was borrowed 'from mother', an example being in November 1778 just after Leonard's death when his successor borrowed £720 off her at an interest rate of 4 per cent. There are many pages relating to this part of the business; both lenders and borrowers names and often their place of abode are given and the rates of interest detailed, providing glimpses of money lending in the eighteenth century before banks became established.

Leonard and his family travelled widely in the area and these journeys and any costs involved are listed: Settle, Giggleswick, Long Preston, Hellifield, Clapham, Clitheroe, Preston, Bolton, Colne, Liverpool and Knaresborough are all mentioned and were visited for various reasons including going to the various fairs to purchase stock, attendance at Quarter Sessions and on one occasion a visit to Settle to have a clock mended. These accounts are an invaluable resource for the historian and require further research to enable a more detailed description of life at Dale Head to be teased from its pages.

Editorial Method

The names of the account holders are indicated in bold type in the text which link to the index, although the index itself is not totally accurate with page omissions and occasionally no account.

To indicate the lack of an account an asterix is used in the index beside the name and missing page numbers have been added in round brackets.

The original spelling, capitalisation and abbreviations have been retained apart from xpofer which has been extended to Christopher and P S in all its various forms has been extended to Per Se, a catch all which can mean almost anything. The following conventions have been used:

- * Round brackets indicate editorial comment
- * Square brackets have been used where the text is uncertain
- * Wavy brackets indicate brackets in the original text
- * A series of dots indicate the text is illegible or torn
- * Italics have been used for the Wilkinson farming accounts to ensure clarity throughout

The Nature of the Accounts

William's account book is a record of goods sold in the shop but not paid for at the time of sale. The entry was crossed through (indicated in brackets in the text) when payment was finally made or else the debt was transferred forward to a new account book. Only the right-hand page is numbered and is shown in bold in the text. This number also relates to the text on the reverse of the page and as such forms the numbering system used in the index. The handwriting is not consistent throughout either set of accounts with regular insertions by unknown hands.

Abbreviations proliferate throughout both sets of accounts, but particularly confusing can be the abbreviations 'li' and 'yd'. Whilst 'li' usually indicates pounds in money, it is also used here to indicate pounds in weight. Likewise 'yd' is short for yard as in the case of lengths of fabric but is also used in the Wilkinson accounts to denote the word 'day' as in so many 'days' work. In William's mercer's accounts a code is used regularly but has proved impossible to decipher apart from when it denotes the price per yard e.g. JUR<sup>d</sup> = 18<sup>d</sup> per yard
