THE LATE KING.—There was a crowded gathering at a memorial service at the Church of Holy Trinity, Settle, on Friday, the 11th inst. Several being unable to gain admittance, the Territorials, under the command of Mr. Joseph Blacoe, the Cadet Corps under Mr. Joseph Morphet, the Fire Brigade under Mr. Joseph Blacoe, and the Parish and District Clergy were present. The Church was crowded before the commencement of the service. A peal was rung, and Mr. J. Blacoe (organist and choirmaster) played 'Funere'. Whilst the choir of the Church, the Vicar, the Organist, and the Organist, read the opening sentences to the organist softly played (from 7th Symphony). The service was played. After the memorial service on Friday, a procession was held by way of Settle Bridge and Market-place. A posse of Territorials, followed by the Town Council, and Mr. C. A. L. Swale, representatives of the various public bodies, gathered at the Market Cross a small platform where the Parish and District Clergy, ministers, and their places. The Settle Band led in front, flanked on one side by the fanfares, and on the other by the Settle Choral Society to lead the men of the Territorial Band. The base of the monument was under the command of Mr. T. A. Bulcock, the Ambulance Corps and Nursing Sisters under Mr. Redmayne Morphet, and ten of the local postmen; whilst Supt. Symonds and ten men of the police force kept admirable order. 300 school children in charge of Mr. Roberts and Miss Wilman filed into the square, whilst a crowd of between 3,000 and 4,000 persons gathered round and occupied every window and balcony. Mr. Thos. Brayshaw, who presided, gave a short address, in which he pointed out that they had assembled for a three-fold purpose. In the first place they had met to show their sorrow at the death of a great and good King, and to pay a tribute of homage and respect to the memory of one whom they had all loved as a personal friend. Nine years ago it had fallen to his lot to proclaim King Edward VII. on that identical spot, and the confidence that had been then expressed as to the glorious reign had been fulfilled, although the hopes that he might be spared for many a long year to rule over them had been dashed to the ground, as Edward the Peacemaker had been called to his fathers. In the second place they were met to unitedly express their devotion to King George V., as in no part of the British Empire did more loyal hearts beat than amidst the hills of Craven. And in the third place they were gathered to listen to one of the proclamations which had been made at the Market Cross of Settle for many a century. In days of old the Market-square had re-echoed to the clash of arms in the troublous days of the Wars of the Roses, the great Civil War, and the incursions of the Scots. From time immemorial the old feudal barons, who were the lords of the town, had in that square made known their will to their vassals. In times of war victories had been announced there, as had been the welcome tidings of peace concluded, whilst the accession of a new monarch to the throne had always been proclaimed there with due ceremony. It was well to bring a little sentiment into their lives now and then by perpetuating the ancient usages of the town, and handing down to their successors the old-world and time-honoured customs which they had received from their ancestors.—Mr. T. E. Pearson read the Order in Council in a clear voice, and after a fanfare of bugles, the Proclamation was read in a very effective manner by Mr. C. A. L. Swale. The Territorials gave a Royal salute, the national flag (which had been flying at half-mast from a specially erected flag-staff) was hoisted, the buglers gave another fanfare, three hearty cheers were given for the King, and the National Anthem was sung. At the close of the proceedings eight members of the Settle Cadet Corps (forty of whom were present under the command of Mr. Joseph Blacoe) made an impromptu collection for the sufferers of the Whitehaven colliery disaster. A sum of over £3 was raised.

THE LATE KING.—There was a crowded gathering at a memorial service at the Church of Holy Ascension on Friday, several being unable to gain admission. The Settle Territorials, under the command of Major Birkbeck, the Cadet Corps under Col. Sergt. Joseph Blacoe, the Ambulance Corps under Capt. Morphet, the Fire Brigade under Capt. T. A. Bulcock, and the Parish and District Councillors were present. The Church was draped in purple. Before the commencement of the service a muffled peal was rung, and Mr. J. Goddard Barker (organist and choirmaster) played Beethoven's Marche Funebre. Whilst the choir were proceeding up the Church, the Vicar, the Rev. W. E. Linney, read the opening sentences to the burial service, whilst the organist softly played Beethoven's Andante (from 7th Symphony). The Vicar gave a good address. After the service the "Dead March" in Saul was played.

KING GEORGE PROCLAMEN.—After the memorial service at the church, on Friday, a procession was formed, which marched by way of Settle Bridge and Kirkgate to the Market-place. A posse of police headed the procession, followed by the Chairman of the Parish Council, and Mr. C. A. L. Swale, with representatives of the various public bodies. Near the Market Cross a small platform had been erected, and here the Parish and District Councillors, the magistrates, clergy, ministers, and public officials took their places. The Settle Brass Band were located in front, flanked on one side by eight buglers to blow the fanfares, and on the other side by the Settle Choral Society to lead the National Anthem. A large open space was lined on two sides by the men of the Territorial forces under Major Birkbeck. The base of the square was formed by the Fire Brigade under the command of Mr. T. A. Bulcock, the Ambulance Corps and Nursing Sisters under Mr. Redmayne Morphet, and ten of the local postmen; whilst Supt. Symonds and ten men of the police force kept admirable order. 300 school children in charge of Mr. Roberts and Miss Wilman filed into the square, whilst a crowd of between 3,000 and 4,000 persons gathered round and occupied every window and balcony. Settle, and the inference is fair that the feelings of the townspeople towards Royalty were as sincere as the outward indications of joyousness were profuse. The decorations were elaborate, and special mention must be made of the arches erected in Victoria-square, Kirkgate, Mr. J. H. Vant's gate, and opposite the Conservative Club, each of which displayed some striking characteristic. Flags, bunting, and streamers of every description, with appropriate mottoes, met the eye at every step. Tradesmen vied with each other in their displays, and many private gentlemen converted the approaches to their residences into examples of fairyland. The celebration commenced on Wednesday evening, when Mr. T. Brayshaw (vice-chairman of the Coronation Committee) presented 638 Coronation mugs to the children residing in Settle under 14 years and those on the school register. Thursday opened with showers, and was very cold in the morning, but that did not deter the inhabitants from finishing off their decorations, and appearing in the Market Place to attend the united religious service at 11.30 a.m. The service was conducted by the Vicar (Rev. W. E. Linney) and Rev. J. P. Back (Wesleyan), and the Market Place was packed. Brief addresses were also given by County Councillor C. A. L. Swale (chairman of the Coronation Committee) and Mr. Thomas Brayshaw. Accompanying them on the platform were Messrs. G. K. Charlesworth, T. Harger, R. W. Garner, E. E. Roberts, and C. A. Milford. Mr. Swale, in a short speech, said they would join in the hope that King George's reign would be a long, happy, and prosperous one, and that in these days of difficulty and perhaps danger in all the decisions the King had to give they would be given to the credit, glory, and honour of the British Empire. (Cheers).

Mr. T. Brayshaw, in an historical speech, said: There is one word which dominates the whole of our proceedings to-day, and that is "Loyalty." It is loyalty that brings us together—that loyalty for which this country has ever been noted. Nearly 2,000 years ago the sparsely populated district of Settle, out of a spirit of loyalty, offered resistance to the Roman invader, who had their camps near Attimere and other places, and later on in Anglo-Saxon days, when a few mud hovels were strewn around the spot on which we are standing, and the town began to take shape, I have no doubt that the people fought for their kingdom of Northumbria. We have on record that 50 men from Settle fought at Flodden, under their leader Lord Clifford. There are other kinds of loyalty than loyalty to the Throne: loyalty to the country, loyalty to the White Rose, and loyalty to the old town. I suppose there is not one here who has not friends or relatives in his Majesty's Dominions beyond the seas, and to-day we know that from Canada, New Zealand, Australia, and other parts, faces are turned towards Settle and thoughts of absent ones are with us.

Mr. Swale thanked all the Committees who had helped both the Chairman and Vice-chairman, also the inhabitants for the pretty decorations, which did great credit to the town and its people. The singing of the National Anthem and three cheers for the King, Queen, and the other members of the Royal family terminated the service.

Mr. C. A. L. Swale had issued invitations to the old-age pensioners in the town to a dinner at the Golden Lion Hotel, and a good number partook of a substantial repast. At 1 p.m. a procession was formed in the Market Place in the following order: Police, Settle Brass Band, School children, Territorials, Friendly Society, vehicles representing the various trades of the town, Fire Brigade, and the Cadets, and marched by Upper Settle, Ingfield, Kirkgate, to Bridge End, and then to the Market Place again. The procession was under Major Birkbeck, J.P., as marshal, and a series of prizes were awarded as follows:—General appearance of turnout, Fred Green and Son, 2 Exors. of E. H. Towler, 3 W. F. Clark. Best novelty, J. W. Lambert, 2 F. W. Embley. Novelty or general character in the children's part, Master Marsden (organ grinder), 2 Master Ion (Little Boy Blue), 3 Master J. Grisedale and Miss D. Grisedale (Little Tom Thumb and his wife). General display by tradesmen, S. Smith, 2 Brassington Bros. & Corney, 3 J. Metcalfe. Subsequently an adjournment was made to the Cricket Field, where the children's sports were held, and in the evening adult races, later in the evening a fancy dress parade was held, when there were many amusing characters, and the festivities terminated with a torchlight procession and bonfire, lighted by Mr. R. W. Garner (Chairman of the Parish Council). The children's tea will be held to-day (Friday), after which they will again have the cricket field for amusements.

LISBON.

SOON after I left Overdale School in August, 1900, I went to spend nine months with some relatives in and near Lisbon. This city is very beautiful, stretching for four or five miles along the coast, and is built on hills which are so steep that the houses appear to stand one on the top of the other, elevators conveying passengers up and down. What makes it look more picturesque is the variety of colouring and height of the houses, for each owner tints his house without regard to his neighbours. The streets are not very wide and in many cases traders of the same class will congregate in the same street, which is named accordingly. Thus in Gold Street about three-quarters of the shops are jewellers; in Wire Street nothing but wire goods are sold.

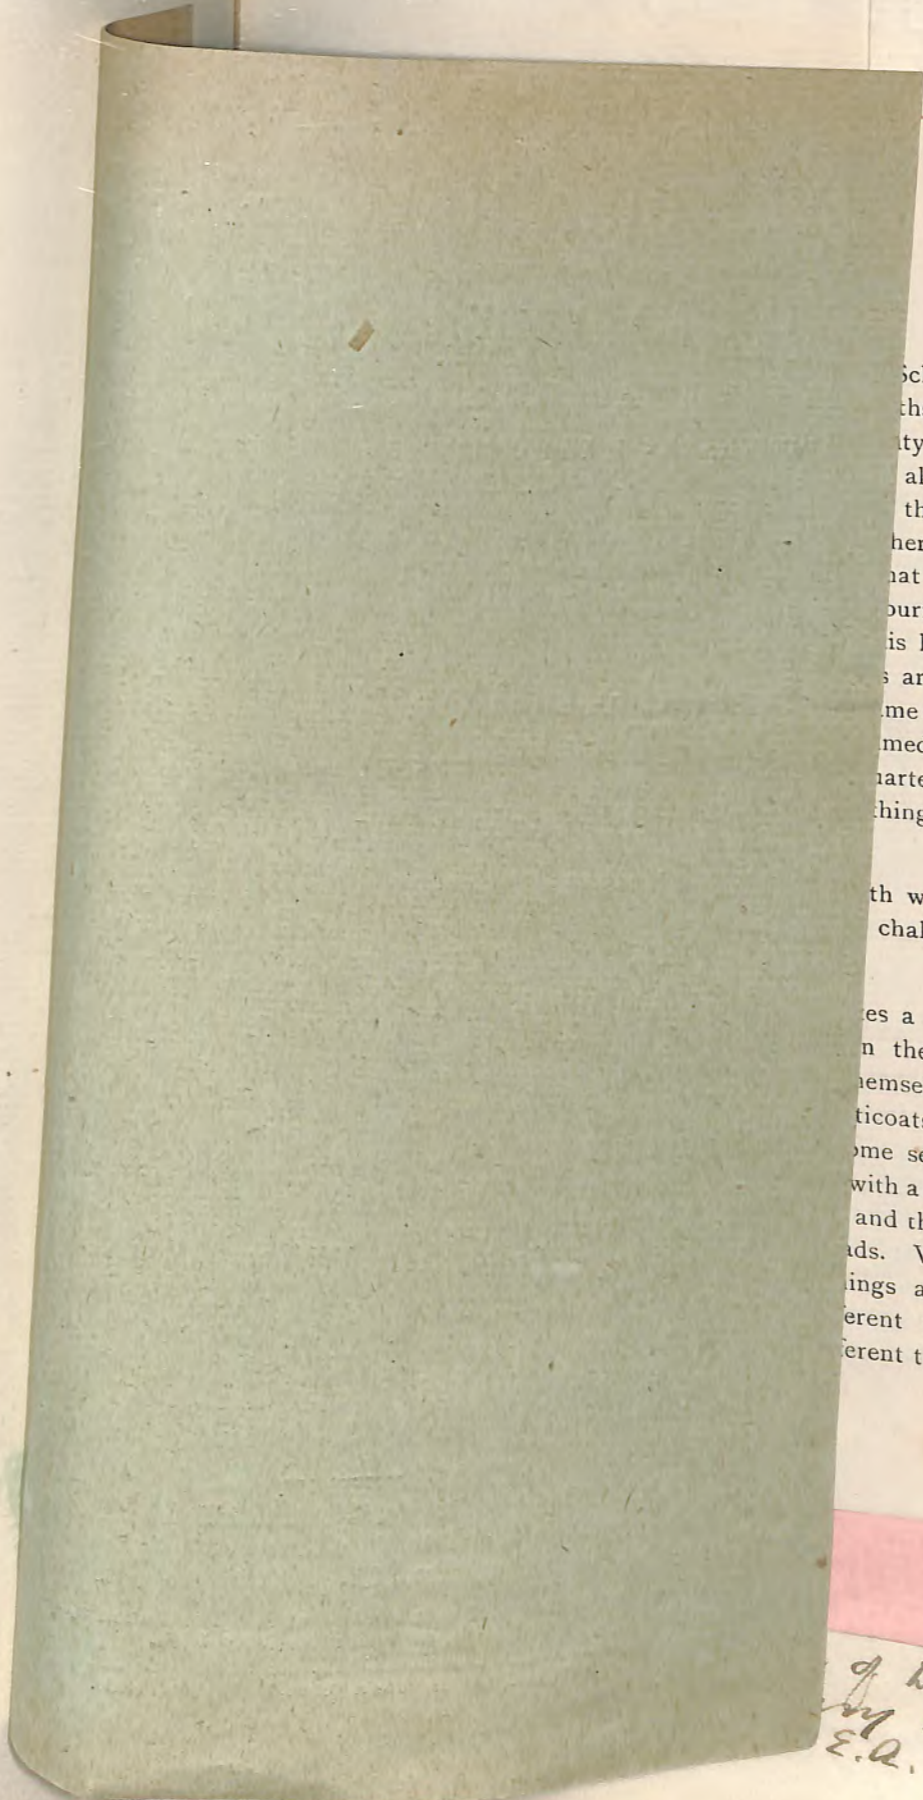

Lisbon is surrounded with walls, and each time a person enters the city he is challenged and has his luggage searched.

I think that which strikes a stranger most is the incessant crying of wares in the streets. The fish women, who are a class in themselves, are very picturesque. They wear short petticoats, sometimes as many as twelve, each containing some seven metres of stuff; they are tied round the hips with a long sash. They do not wear shoes or stockings, and they carry their large flat fish-baskets on their heads. Vegetables, water, oil, and innumerable other things are also sold in the streets, and for each different article they have a different cry, called to a different tune.

DRAMATIC ENTERTAINMENT. — On Friday and Saturday in last week, at the Victoria Hall, Miss Mary Benson's company of amateur players gave the comedy in three acts, "Just to be married," by Miss Cecily Hamilton, in aid of the Lord Roberts' Memorial Workshop for permanently disabled soldiers and sailors, a most laudable object which doubtless appealed to the people of the district, as there were excellent "houses" on each occasion except the matinee on Saturday afternoon. The piece was staged with Miss Benson's usual ability, and the cast included such well-known amateurs as Mr. S. Francis, Mrs. Francis, Miss Edith Brayshaw, and Miss Benson, whilst all the characters sustained their parts in an admirable manner, making it difficult to mention any individual in particular. Those of the principals, Mr. S. Francis as Sir Theodore Grayle, Miss Edith Brayshaw as Lady Catherine Grayle, Miss Benson as Georgina Vicary, and Mr. and Mrs. Stobart as Adam Lankester and Mrs. Macartney respectively, were particularly well represented. The efforts of the whole company were much appreciated by the crowded houses. It was unfortunate that the band which had been advertised to take part in the musical portion of the programme were unable to fulfill its engagement owing to the fact that some of the leaders had to go on military duty with the local V.T.C. during the week. The make-up department was in the capable hands of Mr. John Huit.

There are also some 3000 "Galegos," who act as porters and carriers. These men carry immense burdens borne on platforms suspended from poles which are balanced on wooden yokes on their shoulders. They go at a steady slow run for miles. There are numerous beggars and lottery-ticket sellers. They confront you in every street and at every corner, the former thrust their deformities in front of you and whine, and are very difficult to shake off.

Here and there the streets open into beautiful gardens or squares with mosaic pavements, but the prettiest place in Lisbon is the English Cemetery. The hedges round the paths are of pink rose trees, and all the year round it is bright with lovely flowers. At Easter it was at its best, being covered with irises and lilies, and the paths with pink fallen blossoms of the Judas trees. Fielding, the poet, is buried here. The Portuguese Cemetery makes a great contrast. It is a large area surrounded by a whitewashed wall and filled with white marble tombs, very much resembling our bathing vans, with here and there tall straight yews.

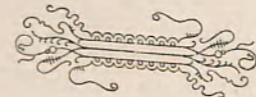

The old streets, dating from before the earthquake of 1755, are very narrow and seem to have a permanent smell of garlic. The most beautiful of the old buildings is St. Jeronimos, a large Church and Monastery, which is now used as an Orphans' School. The cloisters are almost the most beautiful in the world. Vasco de Gama, to whom this church was built as a monument, is buried here, and also Camões, Portugal's greatest poet.

The Portuguese are small and dark. They are contented to live a lazy life and let the English and Americans build their trams, elevators, trains and telephones, &c. Their express trains go at the rate of 25 miles an hour, and until this August, when the English started the new electric trams, the cars were drawn by half-starved mules.

The Portuguese are proud of their picturesque capital and also of their lovely sunsets, and they firmly believe that Noah sailed to Portugal specially to see a sunset.

The English Colony in Lisbon consists of about 800 people. Sir Hugh MacDonell is the Minister. When the Channel Squadron was in I had the pleasure of "coming-out" at the British Legation at an evening reception at which the King and Queen of Portugal were present.
