The King and Queen used the Settle Carlisle line in Warkine. Annie Sunter remembers an occasion when their train went through Selside, on the way north, in the morning and back on the evening of the same day. Mrs Sedgewick, one of the women who operated Selside signal box, had gone shopping in Settle in the morning. The station staff at Settle tried to prevent her getting on the platform to watch the Royal train go through. She insisted, saying "If I'm good enough to signal the train through Selside tonight, I'm good enough to watch it going up this morning". She was allowed on the platform!
