In 1935 this wheel was replaced with one that had been used to drive slate-cutting machinery in Helwith Bridge quarry. This was used to charge radio batteries for out lying farms and settlement when mains electricity eventually arrived in 1936 at 11,000 volts.

The charges were:

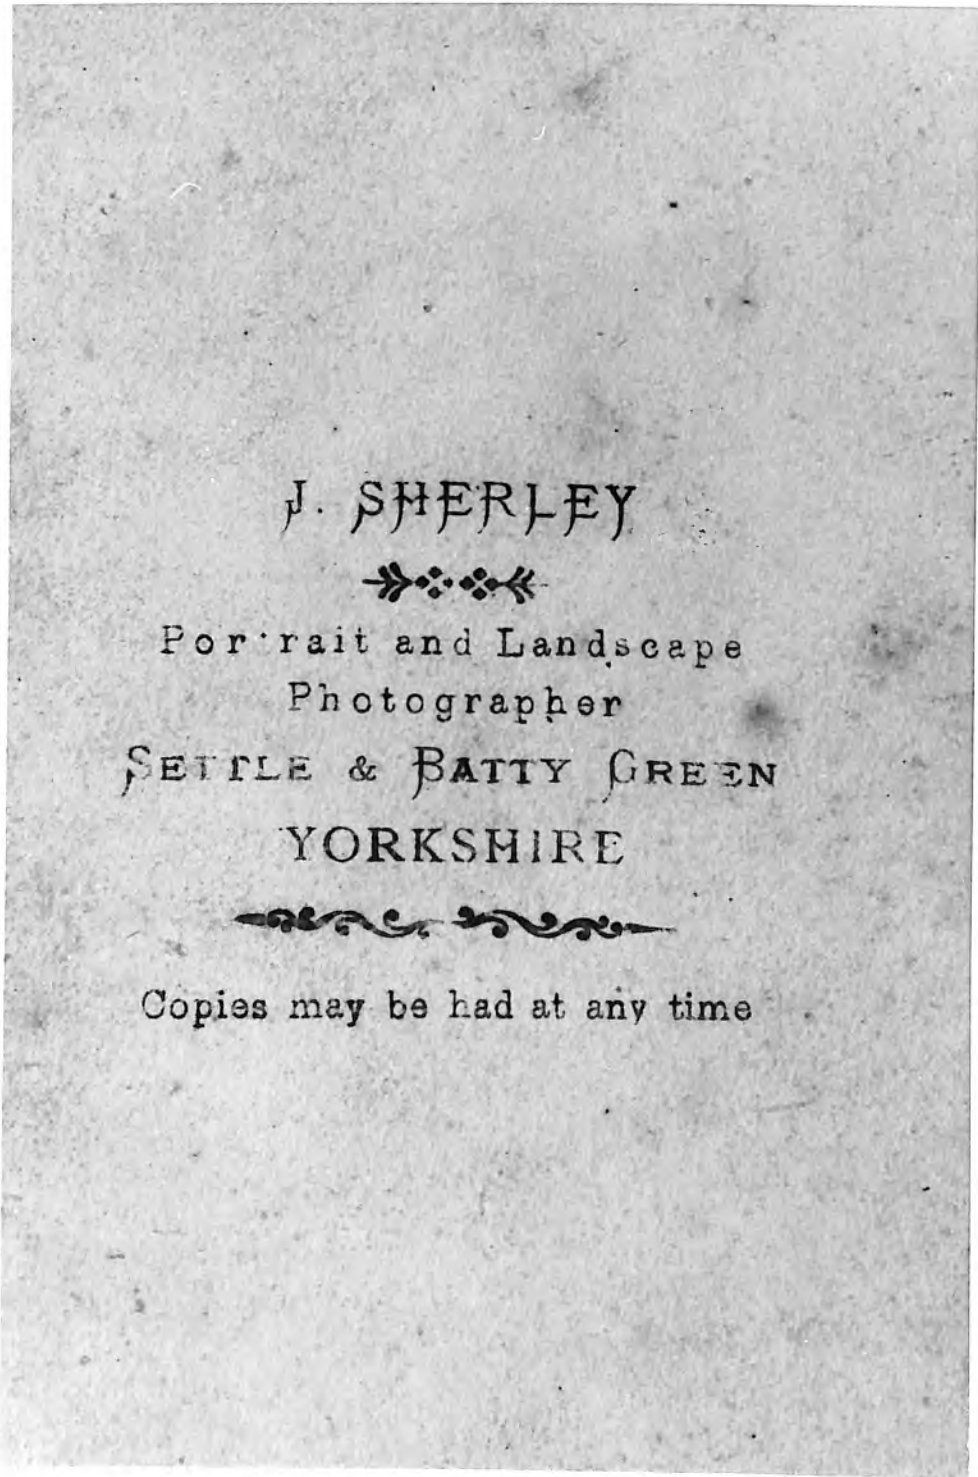

for the two winter quarters 12/6d for the 15 units and 10d other units.

for the two summer quarters 8/4d for the first 10 unit and then again, 10d per unit.

This picture was taken by J Sherly of Settle and Batty Green. Batty Green was the Shanty town at Ribbleshead which housed the railway construction workers, so this picture must have been taken between 1870 and 1875. The lady is one of the Mason family, some of whom worked on the construction of the railway.

Overleaf is photograph of an unknown lady, but the picture is interesting because of the details on the reverse, shown above, which shows that the photographer operated from Settle and Batty Green.

These pictures are of two shooting lodges. The round one is Turpin Hut at Swarth Gill (now in ruins) and the other was known as the Crystal Palace and was on Scale Moor.

Brantsghyll Terrace and South View, Horton before water-wheel, and Village Hall were built, pre 1926.

In 1931 Permission was granted for electricity to be supplied by Nelson Corporation at 33,000 volts. By 1933 the overhead cable from Barrowford was begun, the potential users being Helwith Bridge, Foerdale and Horton quarries.

However, sometime before this a few inhabitants of Horton had enjoyed the benefits of electricity due to the enterprise of Mr Capstick who used the water-wheel shown in the photograph to generate electricity which he then sold to nearby houses.

NINETY-FOUR-YEAR-OLD MRS. JAMES LAMBERT, of Arcow Farm, Horton-in-Ribblesdale, an enthusiastic Conservative and a supporter of Mr. G. B. Drayson, Conservative M.P. for the Skipton division, leaving the polling station at Horton-in-Ribblesdale, after recording her vote yesterday (Thursday) week. Mrs. Lambert lives with her daughter and son-in-law at Arcow, and although she was entitled to a postal vote she stoutly refused this form of voting and was determined to visit the polling station and give her vote personally. To show her colour, she was dressed in blue from head to toe, and declared that she would be voting Conservative again in five years time.
