

There are 31 Metcalfe burials in the graveyard and it's possible many were distantly related. By some coincidence, few of these families had descendants so we remember them here in place of descendants.

John Metcalfe, Folly farmer

John Metcalfe, born in 1833, was the second son of another John Metcalfe, who ran a large farm at Gober (Gauber), just below Ribblehead Viaduct. In 1843 the family had a valuable brown mare stolen [2]. The thief also stole a bridle from Stephen Parker at Lodge farm. The Metcalfes would have been totally dependent on horses for all types of personal and farming transport until the Settle to Carlisle railway was built in the 1870s, straight through their land. The Metcalfes were tenant farmers and their landowners will have invested in the railway, enabling Ribblehead Station to be built in the middle of nowhere. Overnight, the railway transformed the transport of produce and livestock to and from the markets.

John married Ellen Tennant from 'Ashes', the farm next door, in 1860. Soon afterwards John and Ellen moved to live at The Folly in Settle to farm the associated land – it was one of the largest farms in the area at that time, some 400 acres. During the 1860s John had to deal with the threat of the Cattle Plague which spread across the country. John had a servant, John Lund, to help with the running of the farm. John later married Mary Jane Haining and they emigrated to Ohio in the States.

John stayed at the Folly for nearly 20 years, after which he still farmed 200 acres, but lived in High Street. There's no obvious reason why he moved out, although he was 50 and perhaps the work was taking its toll? John died in 1891, aged 61, and was buried at Horton-in-Ribblesdale with his parents. Ellen died in 1900, aged 62, still living in the High Street.

John and Ellen had four daughters. The middle two, Agnes (standing) and Mary Ann had their photo taken at the Horner Studios in 1870 [ph2]. Their youngest daughter, Barbara Jane, seemed a bit of an afterthought, being born eleven years after the previous daughter. The experience may have put off the elder daughters as none

MORE HORSE STEALING.—We made mention a few weeks ago of a horse being stolen from Mewith Head Hall, near Bentham, which, up to the present time, has not been heard of. One night in the early part of last week, some daring thief entered the stable of Mr. John Metcalf, of Gouber, Ingleton Fells, and stole therefrom a valuable brown mare. The thief, after proceeding a few miles on the road, and not riding so easily as he could wish, entered another stable at Lodge Hall, and stole from it a saddle and bridle, the property of Mr. Parker. We are sorry to say that nothing has yet been heard of the stolen property.

had any children. After John died, daughters Ellen, Mary Ann and Barbara moved to Croydon for some reason. Barbara became the headteacher of a school and Mary Ann and Ellen worked as confectioners. They all died down south, but were all brought back to Settle for burial with their mum.

Barbara Jane their daughter born March 18th 1878 died Oct 21st 1939. Old D51

Daughter Agnes looked after her mother until she died. It was a common expectation of the age that a dutiful daughter would put her mother's care before her own needs and desires. Just a few months after her mother's death, when she was 37, Agnes married Samuel Hodgson from the amazing cabinet making family. They are buried in Old G51 nearby with Samuels' aunt Sarah (Hodgson) Mason.

In loving memory of Sarah Mason died June 3rd 1912 aged 71 years. Also of Agnes beloved wife of Samuel Hodgson born April 27th 1862 died January 15th 1922. Also the above Samuel Hodgson born Jan 31st 1860 died May 25th 1943, Old G51

Christopher Metcalfe, PenYgent farmer

Christopher Metcalfe and his wife Nanny Burton were from Halton Gill and farmed at Neal's Ing on the foothills of PenYgent. [ph3] They had at least four sons and a daughter. When Christopher died in 1866 sons Robert and Foster Metcalfe took over. Robert and Foster were a good team. Even after they had gone their separate ways they worked together with an 'annual sale of Scotch sheep in Settle'. In 1904 they had 1600 sheep for sale! [3]

By the time of the 1881 census Robert had moved to The Terrace area of Settle with his sister Sarah, still farming 300 acres. They employed a servant, 29 year old Jane Ann Ellison, who had moved to Settle from Dent. Jane Ann's sister Eliza Ellison had married Robert's brother Foster Metcalfe several years before. In 1882 Robert, aged 52, and Jane Ann married and had six children. They lived on Kirkgate and then at 7 PenYgent View, appropriately enough. Sons Christopher and Jonathan died in infancy and were buried in Old A75, later joined by Robert, Jane Ann and sister Mary.

Meanwhile, Foster [ph3], with his wife Eliza Kirk Ellison [ph3] continued farming for a while at Neal's Ing and had five children. During the 1880s the family moved to Austwick farming land adjacent to Thomas Clapham at Austwick Hall. Occasionally Foster gave his address as 'Austwick Hall'. In 1894 Foster gave the use of his fields for a school treat. The article gives a wonderful image of happy village life [1]. 'The children assembled at the School-house at about 2 o'clock and marched through the village, making stoppages at different points, where hymns were sung. A capital tea was served to the young people.' At the end of the day, 'the children were presented with a quarter of a pound of sweets each.' Good luck getting them to sleep! Foster won numerous awards at the North Ribblesdale Horticultural and Agricultural Shows for his produce and earned the honour of becoming a judge. After his wife Eliza had died, Foster lived with his daughter Nannie and her husband John Jackson at Studfold, Horton in Ribblesdale. Foster and Eliza are buried with a memorial stone in Stainforth graveyard. Foster's son James Metcalfe married Annie Handby, daughter of Edmund Handby. They are buried in the New graveyard J48

Eliza and Jane Ann Ellison's brother Robert Ellison took over the farm at Neal's Ing when Foster Metcalfe moved to Austwick. Robert had previously been the farmer of the Folly in Settle with his sister Sarah Metcalfe, taking over from John Metcalfe (above). In 1881 Robert fell foul of a new law insisting that purveyors of milk had to be registered [2]. He also lost sheep

Robert Ellison, farmer, the Folly, Settle, and David Malinson, farmer, Close House, Settle, were ordered to pay costs 7s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. respectively, for not being registered as purveyors of milk. No fine was imposed, as these were the first cases under the Act, and the defendants pleaded ignorance.

WEST STAINCLIFFE.— After nearly twelve months immunity from foot-and-mouth disease in the division of West Staincliffe, the malady has again made its appearance. On the farm of Mr Foster Metcalfe, at Neals Ing, Stainforth, seven cows out of a herd of 44 have become affected; and two outbreaks are reported at Settle—one on the farm of Mr Robert Ellison, and the other at Greenhead, on the premises of Mrs Whistam.

and cattle in the 1883 foot and mouth outbreak [3] whilst seven out of 44 cows were affected Foster Metcalfe's farm at Neals Ing. Around the same time Robert married Lucy Wilson, a farmer's daughter from Long Preston and they had five daughters and one son. Unfortunately the son, Robert Ellison, and two daughters, Jane Ann Ellison and Margaret Ellison, died in infancy, but just the son is included on the family memorial stone in Stainforth.

When she was 41, Christopher and Nannie's daughter Sarah Metcalfe (who had helped Robert at The Terrace) became the second wife of John Whittingdale Ellershaw, the land agent for Walter Morrison MP, managing the estate business on Malham Moor. John already had six children with his first wife, Sarah Hodgson, who had died the year before they married. 43 year old Sarah (Metcalfe) had a daughter, another Sarah, to add to the family. Husband John died suddenly in 1893, aged 56 suddenly falling over from sitting on a seat![1] Sarah and daughter Sarah moved back to Settle and lived next door to Titus Nelson's shoe shop on Duke Street. Daughter Sarah worked with the Post Office until she married Richard Henry Webb, an engineer and export manager. Up at Malham Tarn, John Winskill took over land stewarding duties.

On Tuesday afternoon last Mr. J. W. Ellershaw steward for Mr. Walter Morrison, of Malham Tarn, was sitting on a seat in front of his house, when he suddenly fell over and died almost immediately.

Robert and Sarah's brother James Metcalfe [ph1] worked as a farmer of some 1500 acres on Malham Moor, at Darnbrook and had six children with his first wife, Jane Petty. In 1975 the Craven Herald revealed that, back in 1862 James and a few other men, including Walter Morrison MP explored a pothole accessed from Darnbrook farm, now known as Robinson's Pot [ph3]. The men even engraved their names on the walls. After this discovery the major passages in the system were named after all the men with engravings on the wall.

James was in Settle living with sister Sarah on Duke Street when he died in 1913, aged 87. James and Jane's son, another James Metcalfe, was educated at Giggleswick School and used his education to run Darnbrook farm on Malham Moor and Hollin Hall farm at Rathmell for a few years before taking over the off-license in the corner of Settle Square, near the current Post Office [LSA, ph4].
