

Matthias Mason, stockbroker

Matthias Mason, born in 1779 in Yockenthwaite and his wife Margaret Procter from Horton-in-Ribblesdale ran Hurries Farm near Otterburn. Their success is illustrated by the quality of their gravestone at Consiston Cold church.

Son William Mason and his wife Ann Horner ran a farm in Linton/Grassington. When William died in 1868, aged 50, Ann brought the five children to live in Settle at the Town Hall. Ann stayed there until she died in 1896 aged 79 and was probably buried with William back in Grassington.

William and Ann's daughter Margaret Elizabeth Mason worked as the Town Hall librarian until, aged 26, she married John Swindlehurst Nicholson, a farmer's son. John's parents Thomas and Alice (Dixon) Nicholson [ph1] were buried with maternal ancestors in a grave enormous gravestones now form part of the path outside the front of the church. There was money in that family! John worked as a 'student of medicine' until he inherited from his parents and then didn't need to work. They had two sons and lived in Liverpool

William and Ann Mason's son, Richard Mason, lived with Margaret and John in Liverpool, working as the headmaster of St Augustine's Church School. When he was 52 Richard married Sarah Ann Lomas, a mechanic's daughter, over 20 years his junior.

Richard was a pretty good organist. In 1873, aged 20, he was organist at Giggleswick church where he was 'the first man to play an organ in the church in which the services had previously been led by a 'cellist'. From there he served St Augustine's Church as organist and choirmaster, a fact celebrated by the newspapers after 50 years and then after 62 years (at the age of 85) [1]. He was held in high esteem being the President of the Organists and Choirmaster's Association. Mr Mason was a 'tall, upright man who did not like modern music'. Richard eventually died when he was 86.

Organist For Fifty Years.

Mr. Richard Mason received recently a presentation in recognition of the fact that for fifty years he has been organist and choirmaster of St. Augustine's Church, Shaw-street, Liverpool. He has known since its inception in 1897, and in 1917 and 1918 was president of the Organists and Choirmasters' Association. He is a link with a past era of church music, for in 1873 he was organist at Giggleswick Parish Church, where he was the first man to play an organ in the church in which the services had previously been led by a 'cellist.

William and Ann's son William Mason started life as a tobacconist and coal dealer — a potentially lucrative occupation. During the 1890s he emigrated to Toronto and worked as an engine driver but died in 1905, aged 45 of pneumonia [LSA].

William and Ann's daughter Mary Ann Mason remained a spinster. When sister Margaret married, Mary Ann took over as librarian at the Town Hall. At the time of the 1911 census Mary Ann was also looking after her 88 year old aunt Clara (Mason) Denby at Mains View.

William and Ann's son Matthias Mason started working life as a solicitor's clerk but evolved to become a stockbroker, still based at the Town Hall [CH]. He made a good trade dealing with the shares for the Settle Market Buildings Company Ltd, the company which built the top floor of the Shambles and then made an income from rentals [ph1]. For a while he had a clerk, a young Harold Henry Holden who became a very talented artist and teacher. Matthias also had investments in property. In 1897 it transpired that Matthias was joint owner of the Cross Streets Inn outside Austwick [CH] — the co-owner was brother-in-law John Swindlehurst Nicholson.
