Dear Nancy,

I want to send you congratulations on your grand reaction to an emergency on the occasion of the train smash. I have heard how well you kept your head and helped continuously in every way you could for as long as help was needed, and I realise that this called for considerable self-control in face of the frightening circumstances with which you were confronted.

We at Headquarters like to think that Guide training will produce the sort of people who rise to the occasion like this, and your action is a fine example to Guides everywhere.

Yours sincerely,

Mild Berriman

Chief Commissioner for England
